

Expect No Changes at the Brass Key in Sunbury

By Shannon Brosious

That's right; nothing's changed at the Brass Key in Sunbury. Well, nothing except ownership. The Brass Key at 200 Reagan Street in Sunbury is welcoming Anthony Sanutti as the new face behind the bar. As of February 13th Mr. Sanutti will be the new owner of that place on the corner of Reagan Street that we've all come to love.

Anthony Sanutti was a native of Selinsgrove before he moved to South Philly with his family. While in Philly he attended military school before moving on to military college in Alabama. Mr. Sanutti spent time as a commissioned Lieutenant in the US Army and even flew Black Hawk helicopters before his move back to Central Pennsylvania. While in the Pennsylvania National Guard Anthony also flew Black Hawk helicopters, so as you can see he's been a very busy man.

Currently Mr. Sanutti is an Agency Nurse, which means he travels...often. However, he made the decision to buy the Brass Key in Sunbury when the opportunity came up and expects it to be a happy marriage between bar and owner. Why can we expect no changes at the Brass Key? "Why change it? People love it just the way it is." says Sanutti. And just exactly how is the Brass Key these days? Sanutti believes "It's a place that's safe, clean and friendly. You won't find any fights at the Brass Key."

Aside from the safe environment, The Brass Key is also known for being a gracious host of local pool leagues and a place where friends can meet. Why do people choose the Brass Key? "The Brass Key has always had quality prices. It's always been affordable. And I want it to stay that way." Says Sanutti.

The safe environment, quality prices, two pool tables and up-to-date music may just be the reasons why the Sunbury Bar Crawl has chosen to use the Brass Key as a host for its two fundraising events each year. According to their website at www.sunburybarcrawl.com, over 40 people attended the last Sunbury Bar Crawl in November of 2006. And each event is more than just a gathering of friends; they help to raise money for different organizations in the community. This past November's Bar Crawl raised over $350 for the Salvation Army's Needy Family Fund. And where did the Sunbury Bar Crawl choose to start the event? That's right, at the ever friendly and popular Brass Key. And you can meet them at the Brass Key for the next Sunbury Bar Crawl scheduled for Saturday, July 7, 2007.

But you don't have to wait until the next Sunbury Bar Crawl to stop in and visit The Brass Key. Grab some friends and a pool stick and just go. Go see for yourself that, although the owners are different, The Brass Key will never change.
